Lester, the 3-year-old son of Roy Kidd, committed suicide Thursday morning about 11 o'clock by shooting himself with a revolver. Coroner Prather came over and held the inquest, the jury returning a verdict that the boy's death came by a gunshot by his own hand. The jury was composed of G. W. Soden, T. O. Byington, J. H. Jennings, Geo. Wallis, W. P. Spradling and Geo. Brand. The principal witnesses were Mrs. Sylvia Blackwell and the members of the family. The family had gone to the 11 o'clock services held by the Holy Rollers. The Kidd family were accompanied home by Mrs. Blackwell. A note was found on the table written by the boy, saying "Papa, I do not want to go to the reform school; I'm going somewhere else. Lester LeRoy Kidd." Coroner Prather also states he had been told by reliable parties that the boy had been mistreated at home by his father and step-mother.
